The Brock Hotel stands above State Route 41 at 1400 Webster Road in Summersville, the county seat of Nicholas County. The huge frame house occupies a large corner lot, nearly an acre in size, in the Brock Addition of the city where Webster Road and Daniel Street intersect. Because of its prominent location and commanding presence, the house is a widely recognized landmark in Nicholas County.

Finely carpentered details and solid, functional construction are the distinguishing qualities of the clapboard-sided Brock House (later covered with asbestos shingles). Utilitarian factors outweighed style in this small rural town where accommodations for courthouse business were scarce. The massing of the building is therefore tall and deep and the plan is suitable to the movement of traffic along central hallways and out onto broad, shady porches. These verandahs along with the high-pitched twin gables that dominate the entrance elevation, are the chief character-defining features of the house.

Each floor of the house is bisected by a spacious central hall, flanked on the first floors by parlors, and on the second and third floors by bedrooms. A rear hall running perpendicular to the central hall provides access to utility spaces and bedrooms on all three floors. There are twenty-one rooms in all, and each is provided with natural light from late 19th-century-style double-hung windows.

The nearly square house measures about 48 feet along the north (front) facade, and 40 feet along the sides. Both the north and east elevations are dominated by 1-story porches. Open and turned work provides a distinctive ornamental element in the porch columns that links the wood columns and unifies the rambling structure. Other sawn work details are found in the attic-level window cornice heads and in the apex of the porch's entrance gable.

After a century of steady use, and with the wearing effect of many winters' strong winds, the Brock House evidences some deterioration and a few alterations. The porches, of wood construction and susceptible to rot, require major repair. The roofing is also in poor condition. The two major chimneys, located near the juncture of each massive cross gable, are not in sound condition. Despite these problems, and the installation during the 20th century of four bathrooms, alterations and interventions in The Brock House have not caused an integrity problem. The mid-20th century application of asbestos shingle left decorative window, porch, and eaves detailing intact. The sum of these changes has not seriously compromised the appearance or integrity of the Brock Hotel.

Dependency

A noncontributing, late frame garage stands to the south of the main house.
The Brock Hotel in Summersville, Nicholas County is eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places under criterion A for its local historical significance. Built ca. 1890 by Daniel Brock, the hotel was a prominent establishment in the busy county seat. The period of significance ranges from its construction date through ca. 1914 when it ceased to operate as a hotel and became a private residence.

Nicholas County was formed in 1818 out of portions of Kanawha, Randolph, and Greenbrier Counties. The Virginia Assembly appointed three commissioners immediately to choose a site for the county seat. The members selected thirty acres near the Gauley River and purchased the land from John Hamilton. They allotted one acre for the courthouse and jail and the rest of the property for the town that they named Summersville in honor of Judge Lewis Summers who introduced the bill to form the new county. The town, being the site of the county seat, prospered and was incorporated in 1860.

Daniel Brock, a successful businessman who once operated a ferry across the Gauley River, bought twenty-four acres of land along the Weston and Gauley Bridge Turnpike in Summersville. He built a hotel on the property that local residents claim may have been constructed from lumber salvaged from the Gauley River during a flood. The two-and-one-half story frame building originally held twenty-one rooms and accommodated guests who were in town when court was in session or those who were traveling along the turnpike. The hotel provided visitors with a comfortable place to stay and good meals in the dining room where there were three large tables. Hotel records and the register that the current owner still has indicate that it closed in 1914 although the family continued to live there and allowed an occasional overnight boarder.

An interesting aspect of the house is that it has always remained in the Brock family although the surrounding property was subdivided during the 1940s. Summersville continues to be a busy county seat and a hub of activity during the tourist season as visitors flock to recreational areas around the community. The old hotel stands as a reminder of the town's early years when the town centered around the county government.
