DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

- A. Site of mill, stone foundation, head and tail races are both evident.
- B. Bridge, double stone bridge, one for Jones Mill Stream to run through, the other for the tail race from the mill, built of stone.
- C. Jones Mill run with trees and wild flowers along the stream.
- D. Thomas Swearingen House. A central block with wing, the limestone house has a three bay, 2 story main section and a one story, 2 bay kitchen wing, all with gable roof and 3 inside end chimneys. Originally, the windows were 12/12 on the first floor with bonded brick flat arches and 9/9 on the second. Most of the sash have been replaced with 2/2. The one story, one bay entrance porch has a hip roof on small, plain, square columns. Built ca. 1760, this small Georgian house has raised paneling in the parlor room on the fireplace wall. Only a "picture frame" surround highlights the firebox opening. A two tiered, paneled door cupboard is on one side of the fireplace and on the other is an enclosed winder stair with small closet under the stairs. Original this large first floor room was divided into 3 rooms by vertical, beaded board partition with 6 panel doors. These partitions are stored in the attic. The two small side rooms have corner fireplaces. Now all 3 fireboxes heat one large room. The kitchen wing has a small fireplace with neo-classical molding. Originally divided into four rooms, the second floor now has an L shaped hall area leading to three bedrooms and a small bath with laundry. All walls are studded partitions. The winder stair continues to the attic.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Jones Mill Run is very significant for historical archeology and early industry, it being the site of the first mill in the State of West Virginia. When John Vanmeter received a Kings patent in 1734 it was located on Jones Mill Stream. Jones received this land. This verifies a mill existed before 1734. The double purpose bridge is significant for its engineering incrossint the two small streams. The bride is one of a kind in Berkeley County. The Thomas Swearingen House is very significant for its architecture. It is not only one of the older stone houses, ca. 1750, but the chimney sets half way out from the main wall. Most Berkeley County stone houses have their chimney built flat with the wall. This is one of a kind. The mill race and Jones Mill Stream in its quiet, mother nature setting is most significant for its picturesque scenic beauty.

9 acres have been included in this historic district. The area beginning south of the mansion house taking in the run which is a boundry line of the property includes the head race to the mill site. Also the tail race which crosses under the bridge and flows into the main stream a short distance from the bridge. The district extends along both sides of the stream down to the property line of the Potomac Edison Power Plant land. This area has been included because of its outstanding scenic setting and association with the mill on both sides of the stream is a low narrow meadow area with wood hills on both sides. The road is at the top of one hill and is the boundry line of the property. The mansion house (D), the Run (C), mill site (A) and bridge (B) all were part of an important mill operation for many years.
