Lewis County, WV

7. Description

The Weston Downtown Residential Historic District (Fig. 1) consists of a 60-acre area located immediately west of the downtown in the north-central West Virginia community of Weston, approximately 100 miles northeast of the capital city of Charleston. The district is primarily residential in character and contains a total of 268 resources, one of which, the former Weston Colored School (Resource No. 70) was previously listed in the National Register. This property clearly enhances the overall character of the district and appears in the Resource Inventory which accompanies the nomination. The district's resources include buildings and four concrete bridges (Resource Nos. 1, 92, 187, and 255) which carry Center and Court Avenues over Stone Coal Creek in the northern part of the district and Second Street over the West Fork River along the district's eastern boundary. Two of the bridges are contributing elements within the context of the district and two, because of their age, are non-contributing. Of the total of 267 unlisted resources, 196 contribute to the character of the district and 71 are non-contributing. Contributing resources are those which date from within the c. 1839-1954 period of significance, while non-contributing resources post-date the period or significance and/or have been altered to the degree that they no longer possess architectural integrity.

The Weston Downtown Residential Historic District is laid out in a grid of the following streets: Main, Center, Court, and Water Avenues run in a generally north-south direction and are intersected by First through Eighth Streets. Unnamed alleys run between the principal streets. The streets in the district are paved and street lighting employs pole-mounted modern cobra-head devices with overhead wires. The topography of the district is relatively flat until Court and Center Avenues cross Seventh Street, where a hillside leads to the district's northern boundary. The West Fork River forms a portion of the district's western boundary and Stone Coal Creek traverses the district in its northern reaches. The district's overall ambience is created by a well-maintained collection of buildings with streetscapes and lawns punctuated by mature trees and brick sidewalks in some areas. In front of some homes in the district are concrete sidewalks bearing the impression of a diamond-shaped motif with the legend "WPA 1939." Some houses have fences both of wrought iron and stone.

The buildings in the district are generally two stories in height and rest on stone foundations; some of the district's twentieth-century buildings have foundations of concrete block, both smooth-finished and rock-faced. Wood and brick is used for domestic architecture in essentially equal proportions; some buildings are finished in stucco. The district's churches (Fig. 2) are of masonry. Roof forms include the laterally-oriented and front-facing gabled roof as well as the hipped and pyramidal forms. Buildings influenced by the French Second Empire style have the Mansard roof form which characterizes the style and Dutch Colonial Revival-style buildings are gambrel-roofed. Patterns of fenestration include the flat-topped window (the most common) as well as windows with round- and segmental-arched openings. Religious buildings influenced by the Gothic Revival style have lancet-arched windows, while those of the Romanesque Revival style use round-arched openings. Art glass is found throughout the district; some houses have colored art glass windows as well as clear leaded plate glass transom sash and sidelights and religious buildings exhibit religious art class.

The oldest buildings within the district are the Talbott-Moore-Warren-Sleigh House, (454 Main Avenue; Resource No.45), whose earliest section dates from 1839 and which has Queen Anne-style modifications dating from 1898, and the 1844 Gibbons-Morrow-Ross House (325 Main Avenue; Resource No. 18). The vast majority of the buildings post-date 1880.

Architectural styles represented within the district include the Queen Anne, American Four-square, Gothic Revival, Tudor Revival, Colonial Revival, Romanesque Revival, French Second Empire, Bungalow, Craftsman, and Dutch Colonial and Neo-Classical Revival. The Queen Anne style is among the most prevalent style in the district. Many of these houses represent vernacular¹ interpretations of the Queen Anne style or vernacular houses with Queen Anne detailing. Characteristic features include an irregularly-massed form, a variety of surface textures and finishes, and rounded turrets or towers. Examples include the houses at 117, 104, 214, and 220 Court Avenue, 208 and 206 East Fourth Street, 450, 349, 239, 312, 324, 330, and 352 Center Avenue, 421, 357, 349, and 345 Main Avenue, 507 Center Avenue, and 519 Center Avenue (Resource Nos. 158, 240, 230, 228, 261, 262, 131, 73, 63, 149, 147, 146, and 140, respectively). Among the most formal Queen Anne-style residences in the district is the 1886 Barnes-Wyman House (Resource No.13) at 357 Main Avenue.

The French Second Empire style appears but once in the district, in the substantial house (Resource No. 245) at 236 East First Street; this property dates from c. 1853 and exhibits a dormered Mansard roof added decades after the original construction.

The Colonial Revival style was born in the fervor of patriotism generated by the American Centennial of 1876. Some Colonial Revival-style buildings are reasonable faithful representations of eighteenth-century design, while others only include a hint of Colonial detailing, typically a Palladian window. In the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District the Colonial Revival style is represented in the properties at 147, 143, 125, and 106 Court Avenue, 440, 456, 463, 459-461, 455-457, and 441 Center Avenue, and 339, 333, and 321 Main Avenue (Resource Nos. 166, 165, 160, 239, 132, 130, 91, 90, 89, and 85, respectively).

¹The term, "vernacular," when used in this context, conforms to the definition which appears in Ward Bucher's Dictionary of Building Preservation: "a building built without being designed by an architect or someone with similar formal training; often based on traditional or regional forms."

The Dutch Colonial Revival style employs a gambrel roof form, which may or may not be accompanied by more formal Colonial-era detailing. Properties of this style in the district include the houses at 427 Main Avenue, 332 Center Avenue, and 209 Court Avenue (Resource Nos. 9, 145, and 207, respectively). A series of three repetitive Dutch Colonial Revival-style houses are found at 203, 211, and 215 East Eighth Street (Resource Nos. 109, 110, and 111, respectively).

Another prolific style within the historic district is the ubiquitous American Foursquare, which is often interpreted as more of a house type than an architectural style and appears on nearly every street in American dating generally from the decades between 1910 and 1930. Representing purely twentieth-century design, such houses are typically square in form, generally with a hipped or pyramidal roof penetrated by dormers. They appear equally in wood and masonry, exhibit facades with two or three bays in width, and have a porch, typically with a hipped roof. This style is represented by the properties at 111, 204, 210, 333, 339, and 359 Court Avenue, 226 and 218 East Fourth Street, 440, 464, 315, and 338 Main Avenue (Resource Nos. 157, 232, 231, 174, 176, 180, 256, 257, 43, 46, 22, and 31, respectively).

The Neo-Classical Revival style employs forms and detailing from classical antiquity and often appears in substantial public and institutional architecture. This style appears in the district in the 1926-1930 Board of Education building at 239 Court Avenue (Resource No. 169) and in the 1917 Masonic Hall at 346 Main Avenue (Resource No. 32).

The Gothic and Romanesque Revival styles in the district occur in religious design and borrow forms, massing, and fenestration patterns from the Middle Ages. The former style employed lancet-arched fenestration while the latter used the round-arched window and door opening. Representative examples include St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church at 224 Center Avenue (Romanesque Revival; Resource No. 152) and the Weston Presbyterian Church at 312 Main Avenue (Resource No. 27). Both churches date from 1914.

The Tudor Revival style appears in Weston in domestic architecture dating from the 1920s and 1930s, and employs a half-timbered exterior finish suggestive of Medieval English design. Houses executed in this style in the district include 551 Center Avenue and 325 and 621 Court Street (Resource Nos. 101, 173, and 199, respectively).

Bungalows and Craftsman-style homes in the district are small of scale, gable-roofed, and executed both in wood and masonry, including some with a stuccoed finish. Examples of this purely twentieth-century style include 501 and 560 Center Avenue, 405, 425, 535, and 554 Court Avenue, and 211 East Fourth Street (Resource Nos. 93, 120, 181, 185, 191, and 218, respectively).

As noted in the introductory paragraph, Weston's Downtown Residential Historic District retains historic and architectural integrity. The overall character of the district is intact and represents the community throughout its period of significance. Some demolition has occurred—primarily in the area of Third Street and Court Avenue, where historic buildings have been replaced by new commercial properties. Alterations to buildings within the historic district include the application of non-historic siding and the installation of replacement windows, slate roofs have been replaced with asphalt, and some properties reflect the removal of historic porches and trim. Other than at the aforementioned intersection, these alterations are widely dispersed throughout the district and do not detract from the ability of the nominated area to reflect its appearance throughout the period of significance. Most non-contributing resources are buildings erected following the c. 1839-1954 period of significance of the district; the extent of alteration of a small number of properties has resulted in their loss of historic architectural integrity and the resulting treatment as non-contributing resources.

Summarizing, the Weston Downtown Residential District is a primarily residential area which is situated on a grid of streets in this north-central West Virginia city. The nominated area retains integrity in both its plan and architecture and contains more than 250 substantial historic buildings of residential and institutional character dating from the early decades of the nineteenth century through the mid-twentieth century.

8. Statement of Significance

The Weston Downtown Residential Historic District meets National Register Criterion C for architecture, as a locally-significant concentration of primarily residential buildings built between c. 1839 and the 1940s. The architecturally cohesive district (primarily residential in character displaying styles all dating to the same period) includes excellent examples of many of the styles of design popular during the period of significance. The period of significance begins c. 1839, representing the approximate date of construction of the earliest building in the district (the Talbott-Moore-Warren-Sleigh House at 454 Main Avenue) and ends in 1954, the construction date of the district's most recently constructed historic resource (the Collins Memorial Building at 219 Court Avenue). The district retains integrity in all seven qualities defined in the National Register guidelines. They exhibit those physical qualities, associative values, design features, and specific aspects of construction which date from its period of significance.

History

Weston was founded in 1817 as the county seat of the newly-established Lewis County, which itself was erected in December, 1816 from Harrison County. The settlement lay on the West Fork of the Monongahela River, on a portion of the eighteenth-century holdings of Henry Flesher. First known as Preston, in 1818 the village's name was changed to Flesherville when the Virginia Assembly created a new county named Preston. The name, Flesherville, was immediately unpopular with the early inhabitants, since Henry Flesher, Jr., from whose father the town site was acquired, was antisocial and generally disliked. The reasoning behind the Assembly's eventual naming of Weston is shrouded in mystery, since it bore no relationship to any area family, place name, or geographic feature.

For its first two decades, Weston was a largely self-sustaining, isolated village of approximately sixty buildings and a population of a few hundred. The area economy, like that in almost all of western Virginia, was agriculturally based and fragile. However, in the 1830s and 1840s the Staunton & Parkersburg and Weston & Gauley Bridge Turnpikes were carved out of the wilderness, opening the region to trade via the Shenandoah, Ohio, Monongahela, and Kanawha Rivers. A significant growth in population in the 1840s and 1850s is attributed to the immigration of Irish and Germans into Lewis County.

The 1840s witnessed significant secular and religious institutional growth in the village. In 1844, Weston's first church was built for the Methodist Episcopal congregation, followed the next year by the birth of a Roman Catholic parish which in 1848 built only the fourth Catholic church in western Virginia. The Episcopalians instituted regular worship services in 1848 as well and completed their meetinghouse in 1850. The community's first subscription schools operated in private homes and were well-subscribed. Weston's first newspaper, the Sentinel, began publication in 1846, the year which also marked the town's municipal incorporation. The new town was among the first five communities in western Virginia with a bank, which opened in 1852.

In 1858, Virginia decided to locate its third hospital for the mentally ill west of the mountains and a site in Weston, centrally located on the turnpikes, was chosen. The Weston State Hospital (NR 1978; NHL 1990) is located across the West Fork River from the downtown, several blocks west of the district. The new facility was under construction when the Civil War began and Virginia seceded from the Union. Both Union and Confederate forces occupied the community and bivouacked on the spacious lawns of the unfinished hospital. Westonians were divided in their loyalties during the War and a few citizens with southern leanings were even imprisoned for a short time at Camp Chase, at Columbus, Ohio. Guerilla-type skirmishes were frequent, but no battles occurred in the immediate Lewis County environs.

Early in the War, Federal troops retrieved $27,000 in gold coin from Weston's Exchange Bank, funds which had been deposited by Virginia to pay the wages of the laborers building the asylum. The money was transported west to Wheeling and accounted for the first capital of the Restoration Government of Virginia. The money was eventually returned to the bank, with interest.

During the War, the restored governmental administration continued with the construction of the hospital and in 1864 the first patients were admitted. The southernmost end section was completed first, but it would be sixteen more years until the complex was finished. Nearly a quarter-mile in length, it became one of the most massive buildings in America; a variety of auxiliary buildings were added in later years.

The impact of the hospital on Weston, Lewis County, and all of central West Virginia cannot be underestimated. Skilled workers and craftsmen were attracted to Weston from across America and Europe, many remaining in the community for the rest of their lives. Hundreds of well-paid administrative and staff jobs became available for both for men and women in a hitherto totally agricultural community, an economic factor mirrored by the community's residential growth. Area farmers prospered as well, supplying the growing census of the institution. For decades, the hospital was the biggest single line item in the entire state budget and as a result, Weston became one of West Virginia's most important commercial, political, and social centers.

The commerce generated by the hospital led to Weston's becoming the first town in West Virginia to be served by a branch railroad line. A narrow gauge was financed by area entrepreneurs and by 1879 extended northward to Clarksburg and the main line of the B&O. Eleven years later, the local company was absorbed by the newly-created standard gauge West Virginia & Pittsburgh Railroad. The new line linked western Pennsylvania with Richwood, in Nicholas County, and made feasible the development of a huge timber industry in West Virginia's interior counties. The timber boom lasted until the beginning of World War II. Weston was the corporate and operational headquarters for the W V & P, and for most of the lumber companies as well.

Institutional growth flourished with the growth of the hospital and the timber industry. Spacious brick public school buildings were built for both white and African-American children, in 1872 and 1882, respectively. Weston's first Methodist Protestant Church was erected in 1885, followed by the Presbyterian church in 1888 and the African Methodist church in 1894. The community's second bank opened in 1892.

Huge deposits of natural gas were discovered in the Lewis County in the late 1890s, and Weston exploded as a manufacturing hub for the window and beverage glass industry, with both raw materials and finished products transported in and out of Weston by rail. Several carbon-black plants began production and expanded when their output became an essential ingredient of automobile tires. Weston was among the earliest communities in West Virginia to have a telephone exchange, established in 1885 and followed soon thereafter by electric lights in 1890, and municipal water and sanitary and storm sewer systems. Brick paving of streets began in 1894.

With the dawn of the twentieth century, unbridled prosperity ruled the day in Weston. New brick elementary school buildings were constructed in four city neighborhoods, and Weston's first high school building was built in 1911. A new residential neighborhood of stately homes set off by wrought iron fences developed along lower Main, Center, and Court Avenues. Moore's Addition was initially platted in the 1880s. Bordered by Fourth Street on the south, the West Fork River on the west, and Stone Coal Creek on the north, this area encompasses the northern half of the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District. As the first generation of churches were replaced by magnificent stone and brick edifices (several of which are located in the district), downtown retail business flourished in new, three-story brick, "fireproof" buildings. Imposing banks, modern hotels, and the town's first theater were opened and wholesale grocery and hardware firms were founded. Automobiles began to be seen on the streets and in 1913 an interurban trolley system joined Weston and Clarksburg. The town's population quadrupled between 1865 and 1900, during which time many of the buildings in the historic district were erected. By World War I the population had again doubled and the first three decades of the twentieth century saw much of the cultural landscape of the historic district firmly established.

Although of a proportionately lesser importance, agricultural production remained a financially positive pursuit in the county, particularly in the raising of beef cattle. With the installation of major natural gas compressor stations and pipelines in the county before World War I, the establishment of the State 4-H camp at Jackson's Mill in 1921, and the later location at Weston of District 7 of the State Road Commission, Weston's economy became one of the most diversified of any town in West Virginia.

Its economic diversity enabled Weston to be among the least West Virginia communities affected by the Depression of the 1930s, although two of its three banks failed. The glass plants continued to operate even though occasional shutdowns occurred when inventories temporarily exceeded sales. Locally and nationally, an undiminished demand continued for natural gas for heating. The New Deal brought Federal programs such as the Works Progress Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps, which hired hundreds and reduced the effects of widespread unemployment. In 1938, the National Youth Administration created a modern athletic field for the high school on formerly unoccupied land on Court Avenue, in the aforementioned Moore's Addition.

World War II had a minimal effect upon the local economy. Following the war and at the end of the period of significance of the district, the Pittsburgh and Redstone veins of Lewis County coal were surface mined, with product transported by rail to Atlantic ports for shipment to Europe and Asia. Established utility exploration companies and wildcatters alike identified new and productive gas deposits at greater depths, touching off a new boom and more jobs in that industry. Older, shallower, and largely depleted sands were combined to create huge holding fields for the temporary underground storage of Louisiana and Texas gas that was piped-in to be extracted in winter and shipped on to consumers in the northeast.

Significant advances in the treatment of mental illnesses enabled the discharge from hospitalization of the majority of the patients at the Weston State Hospital, with a corresponding loss of hospital-related jobs. The landmark facility was replaced by the William R. Sharpe Hospital, outside the district.²

The rise of a global economy and low-cost foreign labor markets spelled doom for Weston's glass manufacturing. With the depletion of mineable coal and fewer glass plants came Weston's loss of rail service. The gas producers found more efficient methods of operation and were able to reduce their payrolls. These facts notwithstanding, at the end of the period of significance, the area encompassed by the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District remained a solid residential neighborhood, a position which it retains.

²The fate of the Weston State Hospital has been a preservation concern for decades. Portions of the facility are undergoing rehabilitation at the time of preparation of this nomination.

Architectural Significance

The Weston Downtown Residential Historic District's Criterion C significance for architecture is established by the collection of primarily residential buildings that displays premiere examples of architecture popular in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. With the exception of a few modern resources, the architecture in the district mirrors a century of development in Weston and reflects many of the popular styles of design in vogue throughout the period of significance. Included among these styles are the Federal, Greek Revival, Italianate, Queen Anne, and Colonial Revival (including Dutch Colonial Revival) styles, along with numerous vernacular derivations of many of the styles and other properties reflecting no particular architectural style but nonetheless reflecting local building traditions within the city. Although the district displays different architectural styles, it is cohesive in that the styles, with the exception of a few modern resources, all reflect the same time period. This trend is common among small-town American communities that date to the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Even so, many of these communities today do not retain the same level of integrity of plan and architecture as that of the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District. Specific examples of the representative styles appear in Section 7.

Viewing the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District in the context of other similar resources, several observations can be made. Unlike this district, many of the other districts in the region are primarily commercial in character, accounting for an entirely different appearance, scale, density, and architectural character. The Weston Downtown Historic District (NR 1978), located immediately southwest of the nominated residential district, is one such district, as is the Clarksburg Historic District (NR 1982) and the Salem Historic District (NR 1980), in Harrison County to the north. The Salem district, 30 miles north of Weston, is a generally linear 14.8-acre district and reflects construction in the downtown following a 1901 fire. The Clarksburg district lies 28 miles northeast of Weston and, like Weston's, is located in a county seat, but instead contains substantial commercial buildings, larger even than those found in Weston's commercial district. The Clarksburg district also is associated with West Virginia politics on a statewide level and claims several Criterion B associations. The Downtown Morgantown Historic District (NR 1996), 60 miles northeast of Weston, is a commercial district as well. As a primarily residential district eligible under Criterion C, the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District can be best compared to the Fleming-Watson Historic District (NR2001) in Fairmont, Marion County, approximately 42 miles to the north. The Fleming-Watson district is an essentially residential 85-acre district and is considerably larger than is the Weston district, containing more than 400 buildings. The density of the Fleming-Watson district is greater than that of the Weston district, and, except for the mammoth "High Gate," buildings are built on narrow lots in close proximity to each other. The physical arrangement of the Weston district allows for more spacious lawns, and deeper front and rear setbacks. The architecture of the Fleming-Watson district is generally of a less grand scale than that of the Weston district and does not represent the sophistication of design seen in the Weston district. Other residential districts in the region, including Charleston's East End Historic District (NR 1978) and Edgewood Historic District (NR 1989), are of a far more urban residential character than is the Weston district, which retains its rural small-town county seat character and ambiance.

Summary

Summarizing, the Weston Downtown Residential Historic District is notable as a architecturally cohesive concentration of locally-significant, primarily domestic architecture that dates from the late 1830s through the post-World War and meets the National Register Criteria for Evaluation under Criterion C on a local level for its architectural significance.
